Winter Break (Ameerah Tharek, December 2018)

Autumn is now coming to an end and the falling leaves have given way as winter takes hold depicted that year 2018 almost over. The most exciting part about this season is when we take a break from our busy activity at the laboratory. Luckily, my friend gave me a free ticket to the Tokyo Skytree tower. So, I took the opportunity to visit Tokyo Skytree with my friends. Tokyo Skytree is the tallest building in Japan with 634 meters tall and rank as the tallest tower in the world. A fast and smooth elevator ride takes us to the top floor which only took 50 seconds. The construction of the steel and glass tube allows visitors to look down from the dizzying height of the tower with 360 degree views out over Tokyo city.

Besides that, I also take this chance to visit Japan’s Tokyo DisneySea. Tokyo DisneySea is a fantasy theme park in Japan that is unique as it was inspired by the myths and legends of the sea. Even though it’s technically Tokyo DisneySea, but the whole area has the western countryish and European-ish look at certain areas. Each station offers different themes. But one thing that I learn about being in Tokyo DisneySea is how it actually teaches us to be patience, as we need to queue for more than one hour long just to get on the 5 minutes ride. However, it was an awesome experience and I’m looking forward for more amazing experiences in Japan.

Photos:

a. Tokyo Skytree

b. Tokyo DisneySea