An Experience: Malaysia is my country and Tsukuba is my hometown!(Ezral Ghazali)

Being selected as one of the research exchange student in University of Tsukuba last spring was the one in a lifetime opportunity for me! Pinkish sakura flowers gave me a warm welcome to the chill weather of Japan.

I was attached to the Environmental Colloid and Interface Engineering Laboratory, Graduate School of Life and Environmental and Sciences, under the supervision of Prof. Dr. Yasuhisa Adachi. I am so thankful to have such friendly and really helpful lab mates during my short period of stay.

I deeply fall in love with the environment in University of Tsukuba, the quiet nature really suitable for a student like me. Although I only spent about 3 months to do my research there, I really hope that one day I could come again to the university, and guest what? I am really going back this coming October to further my PhD at University of Tsukuba. Thank you University of Tsukuba for recommending me for the Monbukagakusho scholarship, I will do my best to cherish this opportunity.
